INDEX

TO THE

ATLAS ANTIQUUS

OF

HEINRICH KIEPERT.

BERLIN,
DIETRICH REIMER.

This Index has been compiled in obedience to the reiterated demands of many persons who possess the earlier editions of the Atlas. It contains all the ancient geographical names with their designations, also in many cases their non-classical, and in most cases their modern equivalents. The number of the map is given in Roman figures, with the marginal letter of reference, thus: Hierosolyma, III Gk.

Where a place occurs in more than one map, the reference in the index is confined to the map which is on the largest scale and contains the most detail, from which it can easily be traced on the more general maps. Thus: Athenae, VI Gh; from whence it may be traced on maps I, II, V, and XII.

The references to the Plans of Rome contained in Sheet IX form a separate Index at the end.

A few particulars which do not speak for themselves may be noticed.

- 1. Names which occur in Greek and Roman literature (exclusive of the New Testament) are given in ordinary type: as Syracusae. Names taken from other ancient sources, such as Sanscrit, Bactrian, Old Persian, Armenian, Assyrian, Syrian, Hebreo-Phoenician, Egyptian, Etruscan or Old Germanic are given in thick Egyptian type:—thus: Sidon.
- 2. The abbreviations of topographical terms are those universally recognized, and are given in Latin in accordance with the use of Latin in the maps, and for the convenience of the non-German public. Rg. means regio. Inhabited places are not usually designated, except where it seemed necessary to add op. (=oppidum) to distinguish the place from an island, mountain, or river, of the same name; or where it is desirable to point out some connexion with a country foreign to that to which the town belongs geographically, —as op. gr. (=oppidum graecum); op. ph. (=oppidum phoenicium). Geographical synonyms are given in parentheses—as Neapolis (Sichem); or connected by s. (sive)—as Sela s. Rekem. v. signifies, not vel, but invariably vide, referring to the article named, as: "Abus v. Avus."

3. The abbreviations of names of countries, added for the purpose of indicating their situations, hardly need explanation. In the case of larger countries embraced under such collective names as Ariana, Graecia, Italia, Gallia etc.—the name of the particular country is added in parentheses.

On the other hand two or three names of countries following each other, not in brackets, denote that the place in question is connected with both or all. In the case of mountains or large rivers this will be obvious. In that of towns or villages it is rendered necessary by the uncertainty in the testimony of ancient authorities, or by the historical changes that have taken place in boundaries. Thus "Gall. Germ." following the name of a place, signifies that the place is situated on the uncertain boundary of these two countries, or that it has belonged to them both at different times; whereas "Gall. (Germ.)" denotes a place standing in that part of the great Roman province of Gallia, which since the time of Augustus has borne the name of Germania (cisrhenana), or since that of Claudius, of Germania superior and inferior. An i. following a name denotes that the name is that of an island; while (i.) denotes that the name is that of a place situated upon an island, the name of which then follows. Thus "Calatha i." is the island of Calatha, but "Pale (i. Cephal.)" is Pale in the island of Cephalonia.

4. All statements referring to modern or post-classical times generally, are given in italics; the only topographical terms used in this connexion being rud. (=rudera) where the place is uninhabited and in ruins; and as such ruins can often be but vaguely denoted by their proximity to neighbouring places, the signs j. (=juxta) or pr. (=prope) are often added. Appellatives denoting only the existence of ruins, without a distinguishing surname, as Civita Castel-vecchio (Ital.), Palaeókastron (Mod. Gk.), Euren or Viranshehr (Turk.), Khirbe or Kharaba (Arab.) have been omitted as unimportant.

- 5. Ancient names which—as in Greece, Italy, and Spain-have been recently revived through national feeling, and might be mistaken for continuously ancient names, are placed between brackets, as Marathesium [gr. Nea Ephesos], to distinguish them from those in which the old appellations have been handed down either unaltered or slightly changed.
- 6. Modern names naturally retain their national spelling only when belonging to languages which use our alphabet (as Romanic, Germanic, Croatian and Magyar). In transcribing other names—such as Greek, Albanian, Servio-Bulgarian, Turkish, Armenian, Persian, Indian. Arabic, and all ancient names derived from oriental literatures, a mixed method has been adopted, equally intelligible to both English and Germans. Thus the German sch and tsch have been employed instead of the ordinary English sh and ch, and the French dj for the English j; g is used throughout in its hard sound, as in "go."

An exception to the systematic attempt to reproduce original sounds in transscription will be noticed in the Old Testament names (Plate III), where the current German version has been adhered to, though sometimes differing widely from the Hebrew equivalents. The differences between these transscriptions and the English Authorized Version are but slight and will be easily recognized. The Hebrew sh is expressed by s.

The vowels have the same value as they have in Italian and German, and their quantity is only marked where it is open to mistake, by - or \(\text{as } Lycab\bar{e}ttus \) Ezeôn-Gaber, ADDENDA.

To Doliche Syr. add the modern name; rud. Tell-Duluk j. Δintâb.
To Oasis major. The modern name should be Uah el-Kharge, not Uah ed-Dakhl.

To Map XI: Gallia, Britannia and Germania.

The necessity of reengraving this Map, which had become too much worn, has been taken advantage of to introduce the same divisions as those on Map X, and a different numbering of the squares in the margin was necessary; the references in the Index, therefore, no longer apply. A new separate Index has been compiled into which many improvements in agreement with the map itself have been introduced. For all names on Map XI therefore this separate Index must be used.
